

RIGHTS AND OBLIGATIONS

Students enrolled on doctoral courses are obliged to attend lectures and carry out continuous study and research activity within the facilities provided and in accordance with the methods proposed by the supervisor and approved by the Academic Board.

Being enrolled on a doctoral course is incompatible with full-time employment, unless an exception is made subsequent to the doctoral student writing a letter explaining his/her motives, and the School Council/Academic Board is satisfied that the work commitment will not jeopardize the student's ability to carry out the study and research activity.

Doctoral students are entitled to:

- A scholarship, when all the necessary conditions are fulfilled;
- Insurance cover, as students enrolled at the University of Trieste;
- Access to the facilities and electronic media as laid down out in the research programme;
- Representation within the Departments, established by the Regulations of the body organizing the doctoral course;
- Access to the university dining facilities;
- Having the Academic Board intervene in cases of controversy with their supervisor. Once it has listened to both of the parties involved, the Academic Board will decide whether the supervisor should be replaced or not.

For a period not exceeding one half of the overall duration of the course, doctoral students may carry out research activity in facilities other than that of the university organizing the doctorate or possible partner institutions, and also outside Italy, having obtained permission from the Academic Board (for continuous periods of more than six months) or from the Director of Studies/Course Coordinator for shorter periods of time.
